

NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

Denise E. Agosto teaches at the College of Information Science and Technology at Drexel University in Philadelphia.

Jack Andersen is assistant professor at the Department of Information Studies, Royal School of Library and Information Science, Copenhagen, Denmark. His research is concerned with knowledge organization and its role in human activities and draws theoretical inspiration from, among other things, critical theory, genre theory, rhetorical theory, activity theory, and social theory.

Lynn Andersen is the director of the Durland Alternatives Library on the Cornell University campus in Ithaca, NY.

John Buschman is Department Chair and Collection Development librarian at Rider University in Lawrenceville, NJ. He is the recipient of the 2004 Elizabeth Futas award from the American Library Association and author of Dismantling the Public Sphere.

Lincoln Cushing is currently cataloging posters and Spanish-language materials at UC Berkeley's Bancroft Library. He has also recently been hired as a consultant for Kaiser-Permanente's Labor-Management Partnership Program to set up and maintain a digital photo archive. His current obsessions are his 1948 Willys Jeep and human emigration routes into the Americas during the last Ice Age.

Jennifer Downey is a graduate student at the School of Library and Information Science at San Jose State University.

Natasha Gerolami is a doctoral student in Library and Information Science at the University of Western Ontario.

Vivian Howard is a lecturer in the School of Library and Information Studies at Dalhousie University, Halifax, Nova Scotia, where she teaches classes in Collections Management and in Services and Resources for Teens.

Mark Hudson is Adult Services Librarian at the Monroeville Public Library in suburban Pittsburgh.

Peter McDonald, a founding member of PLG, lives in Ithaca, NY. He is the Associate University Librarian for Collection Services at Syracuse University.

Heather Phillips holds a JD from the College of William and Mary and will shortly be completing her Masters degree in information resources and library science from the University of Arizona. She is in the process of moving to Houston where she starts her first professional posting as a law librarian at the University of Houston this June.

Frank Rusciano is a professor in the Political Science Department at Rider University in New Jersey.

Toni Samek is a faculty member in the School of Library and Information Studies, University of Alberta (1994-), Toni's primary interests include information work for social change, critical librarianship, intercultural information ethics, global information justice, and human rights. Toni is currently under contract to write a 2006 monograph on librarianship and human rights for CHANDOS Publishing (Oxford) Ltd. As well, she is leading a University of Alberta grant project to provide freedom to read support to Alberta's English language arts teachers and teacher librarians. Toni is a long-standing member and past chair of the Canadian Library Association's Advisory Committee on Intellectual Freedom. And in 2000/2001, she developed a Master of Library and Information Studies course titled LIS 592: Intellectual Freedom and Social Responsibility in Libraries. The course runs annually.