NOTES ON CONTRIBUTORS

William F. Birdsall is currently a library consultant, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada, after a career as a senior university library and consortium administrator. He has published articles and books on the political economy of librarianship, professionalism, the myth of the electronic library, telecommunications and public policy, digital divide, and the right to communicate.

John M. Budd is Professor and Associate Director with the School of Information Science & Learning Technologies at the University of Missouri-Columbia. He has published articles in a number of journals, including College & Research Libraries, Library Quarterly, Journal of Documentation, and Library Trends.

Edgardo Civallero graduated in LIS at National University in Córdoba (Argentina, 2004), the city where he currently lives and works as an independent researcher, teacher and librarian. An anarchist, a former biologist, a hectic musician and a lover of indigenous cultures, he has developed rural and aboriginal libraries in northeast Argentina since 2002, involving himself in the recovery of oral tradition and in social work with disadvantaged populations.

Charles D’Adamo is co-editor of the Alternative Press Index, and editorial collective member of Baltimore Indymedia and its newspaper the Indypendent Reader.

Joseph Good is a graduate of New College of Florida and the University of South Florida School of Information Science. He was the head of reference for Ave Maria University, and is currently a reference librarian in the Hillsborough County library system.

Michael Gorman has been Dean of Library Services at the Henry Madden Library, California State University, Fresno since 1988. He is the first editor of the Anglo-American cataloguing rules, second edition (1978) and of the revision of that work (1988) and author of The Concise AACR2, 3rd edition (1999). His book Our Enduring Values, published by ALA in 2000, was the winner of ALA’s 2001 Highsmith award for the best book on librarianship. He is currently immediate past-president of the American Library Association.

Siobhan Stevenson is an assistant professor at the University of Toronto. Before receiving her PhD from the University of Western Ontario she worked in the public library sector for many years: first, as a page, then as a clerk, and eventually a senior manager for a provincial library service.